Anagha highlighted how Pride and Prejudice delves into themes such as class, marriage, societal expectations, and personal growth.

Anagha emphasised that the novel's central conflict between Elizabeth's prejudices and Darcy's pride creates tension and drama, making it a compelling love story. She explained how Austen masterfully portrays the changing dynamics of their relationship and the character development of both Elizabeth and Darcy. The presentation further explored the feminist undertones in Elizabeth Bennet's character, who defies the conventional expectations of women in her time, showcasing wit, intelligence, and independence.

Anagha also discussed the cultural context of Regency-era England, illustrating how Austen critiques the social structure of the time, particularly the pressure on women to marry for financial security rather than love. She analysed Austen's use of irony and social commentary, which not only entertains readers but also sheds light on the absurdities of the class-conscious society of her time.

Following the review, there was a lively discussion where attendees shared their interpretations of the novel's characters and themes. The interactive session allowed participants to reflect on how Pride and Prejudice continues to resonate with modern readers, with its timeless messages about personal integrity, the dangers of first impressions, and the journey toward self-awareness.

on the various aspects of NEP 2020. The audience was keen to hear different perspectives on the policy, which has generated widespread debate across the country.

Opening Remarks

The event began with a brief introduction to the NEP 2020 by the debate moderator, who provided an overview of the policy's main objectives, including:

- The shift from rote learning to holistic and multidisciplinary education.
- Emphasis on vocational training and skill development.
- The introduction of flexible curriculums and multiple entry-exit points in higher education.
- The vision of universalizing early childhood care and education.

For the Motion

The team supporting NEP 2020 highlighted the progressive reforms that the policy introduces. They argued that NEP 2020 is a much-needed overhaul of the outdated education system in India. Key points in favor of the policy included:

- The focus on multidisciplinary and holistic education, which promotes creativity and critical thinking.
- The introduction of vocational education from an early age, preparing students for real-world challenges.
- Increased access to education through digital platforms, helping bridge the urban-rural education gap.
- The inclusion of mother tongue as the medium of instruction in primary schools, fostering better understanding and learning outcomes.

The team also appreciated the flexibility in higher education, where students can choose their paths and re-enter the system at different stages. They viewed the NEP as a step toward aligning Indian education with global standards.

Against the Motion

The opposing team presented critical concerns regarding the implementation of NEP 2020. They argued that while the policy seems ideal on paper, several challenges need to be addressed, including:

- The infrastructure and funding required for its successful implementation, especially in rural areas.
- Concerns about language barriers due to the introduction of regional languages as the medium of instruction, which could disadvantage students in the global job market.

- The increased privatization of education and the potential widening of the gap between rich and poor students.
- Questions surrounding the feasibility of multiple entry-exit points and how they would affect the integrity of higher education degrees.

The team also expressed apprehension about the training and preparedness of teachers to adapt to such a drastic change in the curriculum and teaching methods.

The debate was followed by an interactive session, where audience members, including students and faculty, posed questions to both teams. Several participants shared their views on the opportunities and challenges presented by NEP 2020. The discussions were rich with insights, offering diverse perspectives on the future of education in India.

The debate concluded with closing remarks from both teams, summarising their arguments and leaving the audience with much to reflect on. The moderator thanked both teams for their well-researched presentations and the audience for their active engagement. The event was successful in fostering a deeper understanding of NEP 2020 and the need for constructive discourse on its implementation.

A lively and thought-provoking debate on the National Education Policy (NEP) 2020 was conducted at the College General Hall of Kannur Salafi B.Ed College on 28th October 2020. The event was organized by the college to encourage discussion on the implications and reforms introduced by the NEP 2020, which aims to reshape the education system in India.

The debate attracted active participation from students, faculty members, and invited guests. Two teams, representing the “For” and “Against” sides, presented their arguments on the various aspects of NEP 2020. The audience was keen to hear different perspectives on the policy, which has generated widespread debate across the country.

Opening Remarks

The event began with a brief introduction to the NEP 2020 by the debate moderator, who provided an overview of the policy's main objectives, including:

- The shift from rote learning to holistic and multidisciplinary education.
- Emphasis on vocational training and skill development.
- The introduction of flexible curriculums and multiple entry-exit points in higher education.
- The vision of universalizing early childhood care and education.

For the Motion

The team supporting NEP 2020 highlighted the progressive reforms that the policy introduces. They argued that NEP 2020 is a much-needed overhaul of the outdated education system in India. Key points in favor of the policy included:

- The focus on multidisciplinary and holistic education, which promotes creativity and critical thinking.
- The introduction of vocational education from an early age, preparing students for real-world challenges.
- Increased access to education through digital platforms, helping bridge the urban-rural education gap.
- The inclusion of mother tongue as the medium of instruction in primary schools, fostering better understanding and learning outcomes.

The team also appreciated the flexibility in higher education, where students can choose their paths and re-enter the system at different stages. They viewed the NEP as a step toward aligning Indian education with global standards.

The opposing team presented critical concerns regarding the implementation of NEP 2020. They argued that while the policy seems ideal on paper, several challenges need to be addressed, including:

- The infrastructure and funding required for its successful implementation, especially in rural areas.
- Concerns about language barriers due to the introduction of regional languages as the medium of instruction, which could disadvantage students in the global job market.
- The increased privatization of education and the potential widening of the gap between rich and poor students.
- Questions surrounding the feasibility of multiple entry-exit points and how they would affect the integrity of higher education degrees.

The team also expressed apprehension about the training and preparedness of teachers to adapt to such a drastic change in the curriculum and teaching methods.

The debate was followed by an interactive session, where audience members, including students and faculty, posed questions to both teams. Several participants shared their views on the opportunities and challenges presented by NEP 2020. The discussions were rich with insights, offering diverse perspectives on the future of education in India.

The debate concluded with closing remarks from both teams, summarising their arguments and leaving the audience with much to reflect on. The moderator thanked both teams for their well-researched presentations and the audience for their active engagement. The event was successful in fostering a deeper understanding of NEP 2020 and the need for constructive discourse on its implementation.

The faculty assured students of the institution's commitment to implementing the policy's changes to create a better and more flexible learning environment.

To ensure that students remain informed about ongoing developments, the institution should organize regular workshops and seminars on NEP 2020. Additionally, integrating multidisciplinary courses and vocational training modules into the curriculum should be accelerated. Finally, continuous feedback from students regarding the implementation of NEP 2020 reforms should be encouraged.
